

User-friendly operation – appointments for access to the file can be booked online

Since 4 January 2016, the Hungarian Competition Authority (GVH) has made it possible for parties to book appointments for access to the file online. The GVH is committed to operate in a user-friendly, transparent and predictable manner in order to assist market participants also in course of the competition supervision proceedings. The newly introduced development of the webpage has made it possible for parties and their representatives to book appointments for access to the file in a convenient electronic way.

This newly developed electronic system allowing parties to book appointments online for access to the file is provided by the Competition Council of the GVH on www.gvh.hu. The aim of the online booking system is to enable parties to more efficiently exercise their rights of access to the file, and is available in those cases where the entitlement to exercise the right of access to the file arises after 4 January 2016.

In order to use the booking system, the parties receive a code in the annex of the notice about the entitlement to exercise the right of access to the file. By using this code, the parties can very easily book an appointment on the new, user-friendly platform without being subject to a burdensome administrative obligation. The booking system and the related technical details are directly available on the main webpage of the GVH.

Through this development, the GVH intends to contribute to the evolution of a user-friendly, fast and efficient electronic public administration.
